126 Archers Shoot The Big Apple

The Archers began entering the grounds of the Buggs Island Fish & Wildlife Club as early as Wednesday evening, and continued on through Sunday morning. There was swimming, fishing, skiing as well as fireworks displays to celebrate the Fourth of July.

Along with the sun and fun, there was a constant threat of rain Friday evening and Saturday. But due to the mystic powers that prevail at Buggs Island, all the planned activities continued on schedule.

There were 46 participants in the Horseshoe Tourney that finally ended with Brad Baker and Robert Eason defeating Richard Rhodes and Bill Colgate.

Saturday's Flu-Flu shoot at the "Big" Apple continued until after midnight with more than 500 arrows having been shot at the apples. The final results were Brad Baker winning with 17 points and a 3-way tie for second place with 16 points. In a very unusual shoot off on Sunday (look out, this may replace the current Flu-Flu shoot) the tie was settled and second place was awarded to Mike W. Smith and third to Brian Sapp.

Steve Trent was the lucky winner of the "Happy Basket," and after selecting the contents that would most make him happy, he allowed another name to be drawn. The remainder of the now "half-happy basket" went to Ron Layman.

The "Club Participation" Award, which is presented to the club with the most registered archers, went to the Seminole Archers of Danville with 19 shooters.

The awards presentations were highlighted by the unusual "Big Apple" trophies which were made of ceramic apples complete with worms. The apples were made by Tammy Hiner of Blacksburg and assembled by All Star Trophies of Madison Heights. The Buggs Island Archers appreciate their efforts in making this years awards so outstanding.

Our thanks also goes to each of the 126 archers, their families and friends, that made this years "Big Apple Shoot" a record breaker for Buggs Island and a fun week-end for all.

Clearing up confusion for archers

The 1985-86 hunting licenses went on sale this month, not without some confusion over a new archery license, which has a $10 price tag.

The archery license, established by the 1985 General Assembly, is required of bow hunters during the special archery season and has two deer tags of its own. The tags allow you to kill a deer—or two—during the archery season, and they won't count against your yearly bag limit during the regular firearms deer season.

License buyers will notice still another change for the coming season. The big-game license contains three deer tags, reflecting the fact that several Eastern Virginia counties will be going from a limit of two to three. This makes the license a tad more difficult to get into our billfold, in some instances.

Even more difficult can be the task of determining exactly what the new archery license does and doesn't do for hunters. At this point, the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries' annual publication entitled "Summary of Virginia Game Laws" provides no help because it did not meet its printing deadline and won't be available until late in the month, officials said.

The delay in the printing schedule is saving the commission approximately $15,000 in costs, according to Mel White, an information officer.

Here are some questions and answers designed to help clear up a few uncertainties about the new archery license:

Q. Am I required to have one of the new archery licenses to bow hunt for deer during the special archery season, or may I choose to use a regular big-game license, as I have used in the past?

A. You must purchase the archery license for the bow season, and in addition, you must have a regular $7.50 hunting license. A big-game license is not required for pursuing deer.

Q. What is the benefit of the archery license?

It provides you two deer tags for use during the archery season. Deer killed while using these tags will not count as part of your regular firearm's limit. This gives you an opportunity to kill two more deer than in the past. Both may be antlerless.

Q. What is the disadvantage?

A. You will be required to spend $10 more to hunt during the archery season. In past years, you could bow hunt at no extra cost by using your regular firearm licenses.

Q. May I kill a bear or turkey with the archery license?

A. Yes, but besides that license and your regular hunting license, you must carry a $7.50 big-game license. Bears and turkeys killed during the archery season do count toward your firearms limit.

Q. What if I kill two deer during the archery season and use both archery tags? May I kill more deer during the same season while using the tags on my regular big-game license?

A. Yes, you may use the big-game license tags during the archery season; however, you may not use the archery license tags during the firearms season.

Q. Is the special archery license valid during the late archery deer season west of the Blue Ridge Mountains?

A. Yes.

Q. If I choose to hunt with a bow during the regular firearms season, must I have an archery license?

A. No, but you must have a regular hunting license, and if you hunt deer, bears or turkeys, you must have a big-game license.

Q. May I use my bow to hunt squirrels during the archery season?

A. As long as you have a regular hunting license and an archery license, you may.

Q. What are the dates of the archery season?

A. Oct. 12-Nov. 9 statewide; Dec. 2-Jan 5 west of the Blue Ridge.

Hunting Highlights

Close Encounters of The Furry Kind!!

By Larry C. Sherertz

Charlie wasn't at his pickup point on the road back to camp. It was nearly 10:30 p.m. but his absence was certainly no great cause for alarm. After all, his bait site was only a mile from the cabin. The previous night he had walked back after coming off stand at ten. Tom Kidwell, John Stockman, Rod Hillegas and I decided to wait anyway, just in case he was on his way to our truck. It didn't take long; maybe a quarter minute, until Rod caught the pungent odor in the cool Ontario night air. The heavy saturation was unmistakable. A bear, at least one, had been here shortly before us. Possibly he was still nearby and keeping us under surveillance from the swampy tangles of birch and pine. It suddenly became urgent to find Charlie Hitt. Tom and Rod, unarmed except for belt knives, took up flashlights and started the quarter-mile hike into Charlie's bear stand on the hunter extraction mission. Meanwhile John and I roared down the road hoping our companion would turn up in the headlights. A half mile away we found Charlie, who was wasting no time in getting back to camp. Something was up. "You stick one, Charlie?" I asked as he climbed inside. With bugged eyes, not unlike a person who had narrowly escaped certain death, he replied, "No, but I got a story to tell!" Charlie, who is normally the strong and silent type, was obviously excited as he related the evening's events.

Things got started round 6 pm when a large black wolf paid Charlie a visit. This alone was enough to keep anyone awake on stand. The stand in this case was only six feet off the ground. At this height you encourage a close encounter of the furry kind, as Charlie would shortly learn.

An adult bear suddenly appeared under Charlie's stand and quietly padded over to the vicinity of the bait, a scant ten yards away. The bear appeared to be in the 200-225 pound class, truly trophy size for Ontario in May. Acting figety, he would not commit to the bait nor present a decent shot for Charlie's awesome Snuffer broadhead. The scenario of Charlie looking for the perfect shot and the bear not cooperating continued for two hours. Then IT happened.

Like the scream of a drill sergeant in the face of a raw recruit, an ear-splitting roar erupted from beneath Charlie's seat that would loosen the most secure of bowels. Lesser men would have fallen or simply passed out. Charlie watched in utter disbelief as a second bear, of Volkswagon proportions, attacked the first bear. Fur flew as jaws popped and the two rolled in the leaves under the skinny pine that held Charlie, for the moment, slightly out of reach. It probably wasn't any comfort knowing black bears climb trees like squirrels. What prompted such violence will never be known. The first bear having been thoroughly and repeatedly trounced by the boss bear made a hasty exit. The larger pursued the smaller bear out of sight and then back to the bait area. This chase throughout the bait area continued, even after shooting light was lost, when Charlie jumped down and beat feet back to camp.

Somewhere near the end of Charlie's story it dawned on me that Tom and Rod were walking in on a potentially nasty situation. A "Dukes of Hazzard" U-turn put us enroute to the entrance to Charlie's stand. As we raced up the dirt road I sounded the horn hoping to get their attention and discourage any aggression on the part of the bears. It was probably the longest half mile I'd ever driven. Neither Tom or Rod were at the pick-up point and I was getting a bit spooked. No one wanted to think the worst. Our discussion of options was cut short when a twinkle of light appeared in the woods. Tom and Rod finally made it to the road, oblivious to what had happened to Charlie, and without having had any close encounters of the furry kind.

Larry C. Sherertz and Ontario Black bear.

Leslie Payne, member of the Bowhunters of Rockingham, shows us how it's done with his 31 1/2 lb. Carp. Congratulations Porky.
